THEME : CULTURAL REVIVAL

"If we are to preserve culture, we must continue to create it."

- Johan Huizinga

Our world is a melting pot of cultures, each with its unique traditions, beliefs, and values. And in an attempt to preserve the diverse culture of India the theme for the session 2022-23 magazine is 'Cultural Revival'.

In modern-day, cultural events bring together young people from diverse backgrounds. These events aim to promote cross-cultural understanding and celebrate diversity through the arts, including music, dance, and spoken word performances. Education is also a key aspect to Cultural revival and it not only promotes cultural understanding but also helps to dispel stereotypes and prejudices.

A way to promote culture revival is by incorporating traditional customs into our daily lives by wearing traditional clothing or participating in traditional ceremonies. With the alike vision Noida Institute of Engineering and Technology organized Mehfil, Ojas, Padharo Mhare Des, Jagmag, Musicana, Unsung, Heritage walk, and gave a cultural revisit to our Guests from different corners of the world.

Overall, the idea of Sangam 2022-23 is a mix of culture and youth highlights to mark the importance of cultural exchange and creative expression in fostering a sense of community and social cohesion. Culture revival is about reconnecting with our roots and celebrating the diversity that makes our world so rich.

मैं अगर किसी से कर्ज भी लेकर बनाऊंगा,
मगर कैसे ये करने का जिगर बनाऊंगा |
ये किस कदर नहीं छूट रहा है मेरे गांव का साथ मुझसे,
मैं कैसी यादें लेकर शहर में घर बनाऊंगा |
कब तक आना जाना लगा रहेगा मेरे खुद के घर में,
कब तक मैं जिंदगी को सफर बनाऊंगा |

सबका मुझे इक हौसला बंधाना लगा रहा |

किन्हीं जुल्फों की छांव में होगा हमारा हक,

दुनियाबी में दिल की सुने या दिमाग की,
दुनिया का मुझ पे हंसना हंसाना लगा रहा |

हर बार मेरा उनको मनाना लगा रहा |

आखिर कब जन्मों जन्मों तक होगी मोहन की राधा

श्याम भरे हैं आकुलता से छटपट करती है राधा

कहने वाले कहते है ,रहा होगा कुछ कोर कसर
प्रेम में इनके कमी है फिर तो कहते है किसको ज्यादा

किन कान्हन को गले लगाऊं किन राधा से बोलूं मैं

कर्मक्षेत्र

कर्मक्षेत्रसे हटकर तुम क्या पा लोगे?
हे राही पलभर ठहरो ; और तनिक चिंतन करो....
क्या आलस्य, निद्रा का साथ दे तुम विजय-पताका थामलोगे?
ज्ञात है तुमको गर अपने बीते बुरे कल का तो बताओ,
क्या इस भ्रामक व्यूह में खुद को पाल लोगे?
न ज्ञात हो तो सुनो ; इस भ्रम व्यूह से जब भी निकलोगे;
तुम वही पीछे ठहरे बीते कल में जा गिरोगे,
तो ऐसे में एक महत्वपूर्ण प्रश्न उठता है...
कि क्या तुम अपने पिछड़े समय को आज की आधुनिकता में ढाल लोगे?
ऐसा कर बताओ क्या तुम अपना सुनहरा भविष्य पा लोगे?

उद्भव

अकर्मण्यता को अकर्मण्य करके, अभी ही सृजन का नया सुर सधा है।
दशों दिश, चतुर्दश भुवन में विचर कर, अभी ही अभी मन स्वयं में रमा है।।
नहीं काल की क्रूर गति का विवेचन, न ही प्रेम के रस भरे से प्रलोभन।
कठिन विघ्न-बाधा, सघन तम मिटाकर, अभी ही अभी सूर्य मेरा उगा है।।

कहीं नील आभा-लसित नभ सजा है, कहीं रक्त-वर्णी उषा सज रही है।
प्रसारित किए जा रही कान्ति स्वर्णिम, कहीं काव्य की स्वर-सुरा बह रही है।
नहीं प्राण मूर्धन्य से आत्म-अनवत, न ही लालसा यशवती जीवनी की
सुधा सार संचित अमर लेखनी से, नये काव्य की सर्जना हो रही है।

माज़ी

मुझे किसी इंसान से कोई शिकवे नहीं, शिकायत तो मेरी खुदा से है।

ऐसी कौन सी तकलीफ से मुझे बचा रहा,
बना के खास मेरे लिए लोगों को, ज़िन्दगी से उन्हें हटा रहा।
सलीका कैसा है तेरा सिखाने का की हर कोई शख्स एहम नहीं होता
ज़ख्म गहरे हैं काफी माज़ी के,
खुदा बस कर अब सहन नहीं होता।

की अब खुद से हार बैठी हूँ,
इस जीने के जंग में सब कुछ अपना वार बैठी हूँ,
और ऐसा क्या गुनाह किया था मैंने की तेरा मुझे पे ही रेहम नहीं होता,
ज़ख्म गहरे हैं काफी माज़ी के
खुदा बस कर अब सहन नहीं होता

वक़्त वक़्त नहीं लगता, लगता है ये हैवान क्यों
हिम्मत हार चुकी हूँ मैं, रवाना कर मेरी जान तू
साँसें चल रही है बस,
ज़िन्दगी फिर गले लगा लेगी मुझे अब ये वेहम नहीं होता
ज़ख्म गहरे हैं काफी माज़ी के
खुदा बस कर अब सहन नहीं होता

अपना-पराया

अक्सर ये सुनने को मिलता है वो अपना है वो पराया है तो यहां पर सवाल आता है कौन अपना है कौन पराया है दरअसल इसका बंटवारा हमने अपने स्वार्थ के हिसाब से कर लिया है जो हमारे काम आए वो अपना है और जो ना आए वो पराया है। एक किसी छोटी जाती के इंसान को हम अपने बिस्तर पर नहीं बिठा सकते क्योंकि हमें उससे क्या लेना देना लेकिन वहीं इंसान के पास अगर दौलत आ जाए तो हम उसी इंसान को अपने घर के सबसे महंगे वाले चद्दर पर बिठाते हैं। एक मां के लिए उसका बेटा अपना होता है लेकिन वहीं बेटा अगर अपने बीवी की बात मान ले तो एक पल के लिए मां को भी लगता है मेरा बेटा बदल गया। ये उनका लगना ही उनके बेटे को पराए कि श्रेणी में रख देता है। अगर आपका कोई दोस्त समय आने पर आपके काम नहीं आता है तो आप बिना कारण जाने उसे पराया कह देते हैं। ये वहीं दोस्त है जो अभी तक आपका अपना था जब तक आपको उससे कोई काम नहीं था लेकिन जैसे ही उसने मना किया आप ने उसे पराया कर दिया। कोई आपका तब तक है जब तक आप उसके हैं और अपना पराए का बंटवारा करने में समय का योगदान बहुत महत्वपूर्ण होता है। समय आने पर ही आपको पता चलता है कौन आपके बारे में क्या सोचता है। कभी अपने भी क्षण भर में पराए हो जाते हैं और कभी पराए क्षण भर में अपने। जब इंसान खुद का नहीं हो सकता है तो वो दूसरों का कैसे होगा? क्या हमारा मन अपना है? क्या हमारा प्राण अपना है? क्या हम खुद के हैं? ना मन अपना ना तन अपना ना धन अपना है तो फिर हमारा अपना क्या है? जब मन को जो सोचना होता है वहीं सोचता है जब प्राण को इंसान के शरीर से निकलना होता है तभी निकलता है क्या प्राण कभी किसी के अंदर वापस आया है भले ही आप कितनी ही महान पुरुष क्यूं ना हो तो फिर ये अपना पराया क्यूं? ये अपना पराया तो बस एक सोच है अब ये पूरी तरह से हम पर निर्भर करता है हम किसको अपना सोचे और किसको पराया अगर मेरी माने तो सबको अपना मानिए सबको अपना सोचिए।

TWISTED REALITIES

A mind is a place where you can think about anything, a place where you can be just you." This is a story about a young boy called Reef. Reef is just a normal boy. Every morning, he wakes up at 6 AM and gets ready for school. Everything is fine in his life. Reef is good at science and mathematics. He loves to explore new subjects. He is a dreamer and wants to do great things in his life, but everyone knows that life is not fair for anyone, even those with a great mind. Reef still thinks he cannot do anything. One night, as he was going to bed, an idea popped up in his mind. He started planning about creating a world, but he knew that he could not do this alone and that it would require tons of money. So the only place he could make a world was in his own mind. Reef is a young boy who discovers the power of his mind to create a world of his own, called Paracosm. Every time the dream starts, he always thinks of a companion to help. Reef found a companion called Rox. Rox is the projection of his subconscious mind, and the way Rox interacts with him is so real that he always feels it is real. Rox is his best friend and the person who guides him in creating his own world. Reef's friends, Rita and Rox, are skeptical of his obsession with his dream world, but Reef's parents begin to take notice when he becomes increasingly withdrawn and starts neglecting his studies. Worried about their son's mental health, they take him to a space observatory to help him see the wonders of the real world.

At the observatory, Reef learns about the discovery of a new planet, the ninth in our solar system, and becomes fascinated by the idea of exploring it in his dream world. But as he delves deeper into Paracosm, he begins to lose touch with reality and struggles to find a way back to the real world. As Reef continues to explore the depths of Paracosm, he begins to realize that the world he has created is not as perfect as he initially thought. There are darker forces at play, and they seem to be coming from within his own subconscious. Meanwhile, in Paracosm, Reef's world is becoming more unstable. The people he created are beginning to act out of character, and strange creatures are starting to appear. The rules of the world are breaking down, and Reef is powerless to stop it. As he delves deeper, strange things begin to happen in the real world. Reef starts to experience vivid hallucinations and strange coincidences that seem to be linked to his dream world. He becomes increasingly isolated, and his relationships with his friends and family begin to suffer.

As Reef's friends and family try to bring him back to reality, they discover that Paracosm is not just a figment of Reef's imagination, but a manifestation of his deepest desires and fears. One day, Reef wakes up in a hospital room after being in a coma for six months due to a car accident. During this time, he had been living in his dream world, unaware of his physical state. The accident has left him with a brain injury that affects his ability to imagine and create. As Reef recovers from his injuries, he realizes that he can no longer enter his dream world as easily as before. The accident has affected his brain, and he struggles to express himself creatively. The mystery of Paracosm remains unsolved, and Reef is left to wonder if his dream world was a manifestation of his deepest fears or a reflection of a world he truly created.

WHOSE THROAT WE SLIT

The infallible has fallen
The door shut, the sun has set
You can't escape the truth, we can't stay aloof, ignoring the proof.
The voiceless now has the voice.

We don't let it seal and you still don't see their great unveil.
To never feel again, they quickly close the deal.
How can you not help but stay cruel? They've been us a fool, an idiot, a tool.
Who made you like this? You've a heart of gold,
Please comeback to the path you've chosen, to do what's bold.

You didn't born as a beast, aren't you still searching for the beauty in every loving thing?
Just like you, we also want to live without pain and suffering.
Come, stand, and watch our Tee Vee screens,
Come, ask about what you're seeing.
I'll tell you about the screams,
I'll tell you about they need freeing.

You'll tell me you love their taste,
You'll excuse, but, it's not you, it's how you were raised.
I'll wipe my tears and smile from your face,
I can show it's evil and depraved.

You'll deflect it's the whole system,
Say it doesn't make a difference.
Ways you contribute, I can list them,
And you very well know, hypocrisy has no defence.

No animal products, we shouldn't consume,
For everyone's well-being, my love will assume.
Have to choose plants, to nourish the soul,
A lifestyle more pure, and may make us whole.

Be compassionate, spread peace and light,
Showing others, there's another way of life.
Where kindness reigns, and love will win,
And the world will be a better place within.

So here's to us 'most intelligent species on the planet and the savior of the needy ones',
May your compassion's voice, brings peace, love and mirth.
For we are change, in this world we made so cruel,
And our compassion, will be our rule.

To do no harm, to do our part, to make this world a better place,
With every food choices, and every space.
Choose to live with love and peace,
With compassion, that will never cease.

For the animals, the earth, and all,
Whose lives and rights, we will stand tall.

We're one soul, we've one goal,
That's why we are getting ol',
To reduce our suffering with ease,
But, these plants are too small, they can't get on their knees.

No more exploitation, no more pain,
Let's vow to make a difference, again and again.
With every meal, and every thought,
You have to show the world, what you have brought.
A world where all can thrive, and all can be,
A world that's fair for you and me.

Remember this on Mother's day,
Screaming mum, a baby taken away.

RAPE

The word is enough to make you numb
then imagine a woman who goes through it dumb
You judge her especially by looking how her clothes are draped then why a toddler has to be raped.

When you look at her with that greed in your eye
They too can slap and make you cry
Their ignorance doesn't mean that they are shy
They just are waiting when you will ask yourself why??

You thought yourself as the educated section of the society
then why those insta groups are filled with your rapacity
You liked her boobs and her perfectly curved body and shouted it as love shamelessly to the whole world..you buddy

You call it love when you force yourself on her and if she resists you call her cheater
You found her alone and thought her as your property but actually they are your biggest responsibility..

Show some respect and give her care you can't imagine how much she will return it to you in favour
I am sorry for the language that I have written but the fact is that truth has to be spoken.

THE INEVITABLE TRUTH

The sun sets on the horizon,
Taking with itself words unspoken & forbidden.
My heart let's out a wrenching cry,
Losing all hope, letting out a long sigh.
Engulfed in darkness, I stumble upon memories,
Are they a blessing or a curse for centuries?
Through the darkening twilight,
I see a gleam,
Are they mere light orbs?
A lightening streak, or faces of people I once was fond of?
They too fade away,
Alas in the end, everything goes away.
A pain grows in my chest,
Is it a fear of losing or merely a growing, crest ?
Despite the sadness despite the gloom,
There's still a flower, full in bloom.
Oh I see stairs leading up to the sky.
So wide & oh so high!
Twinkling stars respawn into existence.
A clock chimes into the distance.
A hand reaches out to me.
Perhaps it's time to go.
Choking upon my words now I can't breath
I smile,
As I leave the mortal world behind.
I'm completely lost now or perhaps I'm found
In a strange world that's far from this ground.

SHE

I can hear her scream and cry at nights, while no one else can.
I can feel her begging to be liked.
I can feel her begging to be killed.
I can feel her scratching me from the inside..
I try to forget her,
But the slits on my thighs and wrists reminds me of her,
The circles I made on my body to cut the parts that reminds me of her
She wants to go away into the darkness
She wants to leave everything behind
I listen to her planning an escape

She is gone now
She is away into the unknown
But she comes back time to time
She wants me to go with her
She tries to drag me into the darkness with her ...
And I promise, I'm trying
But she is getting stronger and stronger
And I'm getting weaker and weaker
My reasons to stay are getting less and less
She has convinced me that this place would be better off without me

I know if I go with her there is no coming back
But I feel, may be, it's the time to go ..
Because she feels lost without me and I without her
I feel I'm just postponing a destiny that has always awaited me...
So I'm going go with her ...
And my be, that is the only right decision I could have made.

HAS NATURE CHANGED ITS NATURE?

A Silent black night,
Echoed with cricket's buzzing
Suddenly, shining drops on smooth roads
And it started drizzling

This is usual and expected in the months
Of June, July and August
But in this era of pollution
Only probability bursts

You might think now, why to give this usual anecdotes much lime light?
Today, we have enough scientific evidences
To prove that it is all right
My humble respect to this brainy generation of logics and reasons
But gone are those days, when we karnel the months with their seasons

The uncertainty and unpredictability in nature has circled everywhere
Provoked me to think that
There is disturbance somewhere

Premature rain, excess rain, no rain, early fruits late ripening
Early winter, early summer, all common these days
Are these uncertainties,
Outcomes of our greed which nature pays
Napal Earthquake, Chennai flood are not mere natural disasters
May be, these are some warning sings for our policy drafters

Beware of playing with environment for some personal gains
The rivers in India today Miss their international guests Siberian Cranes
We all must come together to save environment and our mother earth
Else, we have seen the gifts of nature so be ready to face its dearth....

MIND AT WAR

I couldn't see my life burning anymore
let wild oceans and strong waves hit the shore for I have this heat inside of me and I don't want to turn into ashes for ashes are all I see.
Deep down I was fighting for my joy lost desire and not restful it's gone now It has ended for now, I shall rest in peace.
give me one last kiss.
My grave is dug, my body is freezing
call me one more time, I'll wake up I'm dying.
Going down the memory lane
all I've encountered is pain.
What flash backs will I receive?
shut your doors and leave!
My dear love if u call me once
I'll wake up from the dead and dance.
There's a sweet confusion in my head
the grave's dug the bed is set
I heard you murmured of my death my eyes are closed there's no breath left.

I WALK ALONG A FAIRY PATH

I walk along a fairy path
All is so calm, yet a burden is felt
The Desire burnt
The fire extinguished
Vanity hath eaten all, Nothing is left
A cry of indignation rises
A cry for help shouts from below
Nobody stops
the world goes on as before
A leap of faith is all needed
A will so strong to reach out, to give his hand
But everything is in vain
Everyone has his doubts
The world is burning: yes it needs not
But I too hold back covered by a shroud
Its better to be in the clouds,
Than here, Vanity hath eaten all
Vanity hath eaten all.
When I close my eyes I see
Silent eyes with no hope I feel
To raw ambition and indifference and stare
At selfishness and pride I stare
Taking its place apathy
Feeding on every soul
I still hear the wind passing by
Carrying the cry for help
Vanity hath strangled all
Why all this happened no one knows
Hope long gone
when I close my eyes I see
The world still going on.

NO LIMITS

I believed that this world was all,
there was nothing more beyond.
I was living in my own fantasy,
seems like I was so busy.
I thought of living a limited life,
with a successful job and a beautiful wife.
But sometimes in my life,
I felt like I was doing wrong,
there was something more beyond.
After sometimes I became a little curious,
the questions in my heart made me more furious.
My teenage mind was all distorted,
and my existence made myself more tormented.
The vortex of questions was seizing my mind,
the feeling of anxiety, I can't explain of that time.
The fear raised in me was of death,
my mind showed me images when I will go out of breath.
To console my heart, to comfort my brain,
I was looking for a solution to remove this pain.
I decided to gain all opportunity in my life,
to go as far as I can with that pain as my knife.
As I began working, bearing with the pain,
I thought that not all those suffering was in vain.
The pain in my brain made me realize my existence,
and the reality flew in me like a new essence.
However, the deathbed still was a fear in my mind,
to think that fear made my soul tightly bind.
I could not escape how much I tried and the god would not listen how much I cried.
However, I am one to never give up,
With all falling in my life,
I will never forget to get up.
I will live with no limits in my life,
with my true existence and a blunt knife.

TRULY SALIENT

Do you happen to believe that you have low self-esteem? Your self-esteem is the combination of your physical self-image, accomplishments, capabilities and perceived success. In short, it's your opinion of yourself. Self-esteem refers to a person's overall sense of his or her value or worth. It can be considered a sort of measure of how much a person "values, approves of, appreciates, prizes, or likes him or herself" According to self-esteem expert Morris Rosenberg, self-esteem is quite simply one's attitude toward oneself. He described it as a "favourable or unfavourable attitude toward the self". Loving yourself may sound simple, but we all know how hard it is. Sometimes it can be a roller coaster ride between being happy with yourself and wishing you could change for any better. There are so many things that can hamper or affect your image of yourself, and some of them may not be as good, believe me. Very common examples of self-esteem issues include pleasing people, easily getting angered, feeling that your opinion is not important, doubting every discussion, experiencing the emotions of sadness and worthlessness, having avoidance behaviour, giving more attention to your weaknesses, struggling to say no. Some people are born with confidence, while others take time to develop as they grow up. But there are times when your confidence takes a knock, right? It is common to wish to have self-worth as much as others. While things that are out of control may impact a lot like "people", it is important to know which things you are in control of and how you can prevent yourself from destroying your own self. And worry not, there are ways to increase that poor self-value to a height, except the fact that you are ready to come out of your comfort zone for your betterment, because even the tiny steps are worth it.

1) Be mindful- We can't change something if we don't recognize that there is something to change. As soon as you find yourself going down the path of self-criticism, gently note what is happening, be curious about it, and remind yourself, "These are thoughts, not facts."

2) Avoid falling into the compare-and-despair rabbit hole "Two key things I emphasize are to practice acceptance and stop comparing yourself to others," says psychotherapist Kimberly Hershenson, LMSW. Remember every individual is different. Comparisons only lead to negative self-talk, which leads to anxiety and stress, rather take a look and try to upgrade self.

3) Ask yourself-Ever felt like it is none other than the critic part of you who is actually stopping you from doing what you want? What do you think the critic was trying to protect you from? How was the critic doing this? What are you scared might happen if the critic were silenced? Clearing out such views can really help to get to know where things are lacking.

4) Reward yourself- Treat yourself right, care for yourself because why not? By positive reinforcement, you become more motivated and driven to do the task and you will look forward to doing the task because it makes you feel good. So wholeheartedly reward "self" even for the tiniest accomplishment because you know that you've worked for it and deserve it.

5) Respect yourself-Self-respect is achieved when you know you're living up to your own high standards, you value your skills, choices, opinions, and knowledge, and you believe you're deserving of being treated well by yourself and by others, the very crucial part among any other stated which people tend to overlook.

It may seem scary to start at first but remember to be kind to yourself and let yourself make mistakes along the way. Self-esteem is necessary to move forward in life, the moment you stop believing in yourself, you abandon all the hopes and success. So do not give up on yourself.

PARANORMAL TRUTHS

There is nothing like ghosts or psychic powers, it is just our brain showing some mirages. This is a typical answer to the question-“Do you believe in ghosts?” So what is your answer to this question? If you believe in paranormal powers then you must read this article.

Paranormal activities do not have any scientific explanation (supernatural) but have been certainly observed by folks or paranormal researchers. Yes, there are paranormal researchers and it is a profession. Paranormal investigators investigate unexplained events, from strange sounds and door closures to floating objects and appearances. Skeptics often attribute these phenomena to unstable foundations, gas leaks, or delusions or coincidences.

According to a survey performed by using Ipsos on predictions for international troubles in January 2019, 57 percent of Indian respondents thought it unlikely that we can discover ghosts truly exist that year. However, 36 percent of Malaysians think that it was a plausible idea

Most of us do not believe in all such things and consider them as superstitions. But in the 21st century, why do some people still believe in paranormal powers? Are there some scientific facts revolving around these powers? Do they really exist or just some unproved beliefs? By the end of this hopefully, you will be able to answer these questions.

Why do some people believe in the existence of paranormal energy?

Most people believe in ghosts because of some personal experience that maybe, a family belief in the existence of friendly ghosts in the house or some unnerving experience during a ghost tour or local haunt. However, many humans trust that support for the lifestyles of ghosts may be discovered in no less a hard science than modern physics.

It is widely claimed that Albert Einstein suggested a scientific basis for the reality of ghosts, based on the First Law of Thermodynamics: If energy cannot be created or destroyed but only change its form, what happens to our body's energy when we die? Could that somehow be manifested as a ghost?

As the saying goes that half-knowledge is worse than ignorance. Until you dig into the basic physics the above assumption looks appropriate to believe in the existence of unexplained powers. The answer is not at all mysterious, it is very simple. After a person dies, the energy in his or her body goes into the environment. This energy is released in the form of heat, and the body is transferred to the animals that eat us and the plants that absorb us. There is no bodily "energy" that survives death that is detected by popular ghost-hunting devices.

The science behind the existence of the unexplained phenomenon

Scientists and psychologists have already started to look at why some people are still intrigued with the old superstitions and folklore. Their findings may tell some hidden virtues of believing in the paranormal.

We often listen to people saying that ghosts are nothing but the faulty activity of the brain. According to a few reviews invisibly shifting objects are discovered while there is harm in certain regions of the right hemisphere which can be accountable for visual processing; positive sorts of epilepsy (neurological sickness), meanwhile, can cause the spooky feeling that a presence is stalking you nearby – perhaps underlying accounts of faceless “shadow human beings” sneaking within the surrounding. So, hence we can positively say that some fault in the brain can show the existence of ghosts.

But the encounter with ghosts is not always due to a malfunctioning of the brain. Certain visual illusions ought to confound the healthy brain and create legendary beings. For example, one young Italian psychologist looked inside the mirror one morning and discovered a grizzled old man staring again at him. His later experiments showed that the illusion is highly common while you take a look at your reflection in the half-light, possibly because the mind struggles to construct the contours of your face, so it begins to fill in the missing information – even supposing that results in the arrival of skulls, old hags or hideous animals.

Failure in finding any scientific evidence about the existence of ghosts

The evidence for ghosts is no better today than it was a century ago. There may be two possible reasons why ghost hunters failed in finding evidence. The first can be that ghosts don't exist and that reports of ghosts can be explained by psychology, misperceptions, mistakes, or hoaxes. The second option can be that ghosts do exist, but that ghost hunters do not possess the scientific tools or mind-set to uncover any meaningful evidence.

But ultimately, ghost hunting is not about the evidence at all (if it was, the search would have been abandoned long ago). Instead, it's about having fun with friends, telling stories, and the enjoyment of pretending to search the edge of the unknown. After all, everyone loves a good ghost story.

THE SILENCE OF MY LIPS

'What do you see first when you look at me?'

'You.'

'Yes, but what in me?'

(When you kick a stone on the road and look up at the sky, you only say 'it's beautiful', your eyes can never focus on the stars or the moon or the clouds alone. That's the beauty of being boundless and complete in itself.)

'I never loved you in parts, only in whole. There's no beginning or end in your outlines, everything you touch becomes a part of you. When I look at you, I fall in love with the world.'

'Why does it always have to be poetry? Why can't you be normal? Just for once. Just tell me I have beautiful eyes or a pretty smile, why does it always have to be an otherworldly metaphor!'

'But this world is stitched with lies, there is not a thread here that could sing like locks of your hair do. How can it not be poetry when it is spoken for you?'

(Her eyes are twitching, and her feet are tapping against the floor that still reeks of all the nights we were together. I wonder if she remembers them.) 'I have started to suffocate between your similes and alliterations, my scars smirk at me with pride now that you've romanticised their ugly contortions. I want to breathe the rotting scent of my wounds before they die in a eulogy you pen after five glasses of wine.'

'I am only capturing your beauty so that on days mirrors stop pleasing you, you can smile reading yourself in the punctuations that keep you aligned. The still silence of my lips is a running verse in my mouth.'

(Your lips part and let out a sigh which is the only oxygen my lungs know how to breathe, but I won't say this aloud, I'm afraid you'd seal your mouth with a tongue knotted with complaints, and I'd sit smoking my drafts again, and my poems shall end up as ashtrays. Again.)

'You're growing out of love with me, aren't you?'

'I am drowning in it. I just don't know if I have it in me to swim anymore. There are two choices in this world- you either fall in love or you fall in a grave, I feel like I am a ghost in the graveyard, I am breathing but I am not alive.'

'Love isn't love until you feel the entirety of it. It was never meant to make you feel alive, only a little less inclined towards slitting your wrist. This world is crowded with walking graves- people don't fear death here, they shudder at the idea of life.'

'You have made a home in darkness, and have made a world in that home, it is beautiful but deadly. I'd rather be blinded by light than by darkness. But how do you walk away from darkness when you've become a part of it?'

'Then don't walk away, stay. Light is all about surfaces, we are cherishing the depth.'

(She looks tired. Her fingers are circling her palm, but the lines have started to itch her arms. Her hairs are easing out of the elastic band, but her back is weighed with a cloak of pretention, that the war outside her doesn't hurt her anymore, she kills herself with the turmoils gasping in her veins.)

'I want to leave. I want to run away from you before you pull me into another verse again. I am not your muse, you glide me as ink. You empty my insides and let them flow on lethal pages, until I start to fade with every dry night. As much as I love you, I don't want to die a poetry that breaks more hearts than heals. Let me go.'

'But you will live as a poetry, as words that feel ashamed of never being enough to paint you in their curves. I am never letting you fade, I want to imprint you in hidden drawers and cornered shelves, so that the world remembers you in its edges when the curves refuse to bend anymore.'

(Her eyes have started to water with all the blood boiling in her, she is holding back the pain because she wants to let me know that she is strong- strong enough to fight with this, with me, with herself. I want to tell her that it's okay if she's not, but I'm afraid her tears shall fume into embers of anger, and i'll curse the world with a poem that spits.)

'I'm worn down with your imagery so much so that I've forgotten how I used to look before I met you. I walk with crouching shoulders and curled toes, as if I'm afraid to be a part of the life that exists outside my body, as if, I touch the air around me, I'll stain it with the war that refuses to settle beneath my skin and i'll choke others with the deaths that live inside me.'

'The world that breathes the air you exhale is a world that loves your tragedies before it holds your sagas. You fill fragrance in hearts rusted with pollutants of ignorant strangers. Let me love you how literature is loved by critics, with defensive passion.'

'I don't want to be loved anymore. I'd rather live as an epic than a romance with no sequels. It's high time. Perhaps I am too shallow to feel true love swimming inside me. Before I leave, answer me honestly, what do you see first when you look at me?'

(She is already on her feet and with the gravitational force pulling her to the ground, it feels like she has become a part of a chilly breeze that was never meant to arrive on a summer evening. I close my eyes, and open them. I look at her for the last time.)

'You. (Long gone)'

PRODIGIOUS - INDIA

The word "BHARAT" originated from the word BHARATH which is made of two root words BHA-Light and Rata-Knowledge eradicating the darkness of ignorance. The people who stay in country are called "BHARTIYA". India, generally referred as "Jumbudweepa", "Bharatavarsh", "Bharatkhande" is a great country. Its greatness lies in its culture, history, heritage, integrity, civilization, prosperity and so on. It has distinct physical and cultural features. It is the birthplace of religions such as Hinduism, Buddhism, Jainism, and Sikhism. The Preamble of the constitution states India to be a "Sovereign, Socialist, Secular, Democratic, Republic", It is a land of diversities, united together as an entity. Its greatness is indefinable proving it how truly incredible our nation is.

Earlier India's culture, heritage and integrity were its identity, but today India is being caught on the basis of socio-economic Problems. The present system does not resemble to what the preamble stated India to be. The sovereignty of India has been threatened due to the interference of Powerful countries such as USA in the policy making process. In this context, Nuclear Liability Act is the best example. Even after 75 years of independence the democratic form of government could not make the country a developed one. Besides this, the country has been suffering from problems such as poverty, illiterately, unemployment, malnutrition, income inequalities, imbalanced sex ratio, unequal regional development, low standards of living, inflation. The fact is saddening but in India still 21.9% of population below poverty line, 9.4% population is unemployed and 47% of children are malnourished, with a sex ratio is 932 females per 1000 males. India ranks 130th in Human Development India. The 1991 'New Economic Reforms' which hoped to bring growth to the country has also brought problems along with it. Increasing literacy rate could help in development. For instance Kerala, the state where literacy rate is high, the intensity of socio-economic problems is less, people must be made aware of all the issues affecting their lives and they must also be made aware of their political rights. Then only democratic form of government would be successful. Being the citizens of India, every Indian must discharge his/her duty to the country's development bringing it out of the clutches of problems and restoring its lot fame.

FROM LOSS, RESILIENCE

Once, there was a young man who was searching for inspiration and direction in life. He had heard many different answers to the question of what the best inspiration in life was, but none of them had truly resonated with him. He had tried to find inspiration in teachers, parents, success, love, and even life itself, but nothing seemed to stick.

Then, one day, the young man experienced a profound loss. He had never wanted to lose what he did, and it was a painful experience that left him feeling lost and alone. He struggled to express his emotions and found it difficult to move on. He realized that this loss had a serious impact on his life, and he needed time to heal and recover from the trauma.

As the young man worked through his pain, he began to understand that everyone experiences loss and suffering in different ways. Whether it was the loss of material possessions, money, hope, or an individual, everyone had to face it at least once. He learned that it was important to keep a smile on his face, even when he was hurting, because no one else cared what he was going through. He also discovered that advertising his feelings to others only resulted in unbearable pain that he couldn't afford.

Over time, the young man began to accept that loss was a part of life. He realized that those who had never experienced loss were the unluckiest in the world, as it was only through loss that they could learn to face different situations with a new approach. He learned how to smile, even in the face of adversity, and waited patiently for the right time and person to come into his life.

Through this experience, the young man found the biggest inspiration in life - the loss itself. He realized that it had taken him on a journey of self-discovery and growth, and had ultimately led him to the correct path. He decided to share his story with others in the hope that it would inspire them to find their own sources of inspiration and motivation in life.

MIND THE GAP

I know by the time this letter licks your hands, your heart would already have dried out of all the compassion it had held. After scrounging for days about your whereabouts, I have come to know that you're leaving Delhi tonight, to where, no one knows. They don't know why either, but I do. I can almost hear your parents telling you that depression is a myth, and mental illness doesn't run in your family, so your blood is healthy and untouched, while your brain is rotting away because of the company you keep.

I have spent countless nights awake with you, because you couldn't sleep, and I have shared that emptiness while people were adding to it. I have let you sign my name when you went to see a therapist, and we have always shared the metro rides back home, and everytime the announcement rang, 'Mind The Gap', I have felt you scoot closer to my side. But my love could never make up for the doubts and questions raised upon you by the society, and more so, your family.

I don't blame you for running away, because I have watched you undress in a manner that you didn't want to ease out of your clothes but your flesh. I have seen the hollow in your eyes, and felt the screams you have gulped down while everyone complained of you being anti-social. I have seen you laughing aloud wishing your tears would go by unnoticed and I know it was you who scribbled behind the washroom door, 'Let me live' while I was watching you die.

I wish my love would have been enough to conceal you from all the hurt from outside, but when your father asked you to shut up and forget about this mental health crap, I knew I could never save you from the hurt within yourself. I wish I could see you one more time, I'd have read you so intently, that your contours would have melted in my flesh. I would have worn your skin with pride.

But I let you go. Because I can already imagine you on the train running away from the silent wars of this city, from the ignorance of your parents, from the mockery of your siblings, from the toxicity of your friends, but more so because I can imagine you hoping to run away from yourself. I hope the new air frees you of the invisible prison they created for you.

It would have taken just a few words to keep you here and make you feel comfortable and confident in the sheets of your skin.

'are you really okay' instead of 'why are you so distant'

'do you want to talk' instead of 'stop overthinking'

'how can i help you' instead of 'what's wrong with you'

If people would have said these more often, perhaps you would still be in the metro with me, sharing the ride home, clutching on your yellow t-shirt while the announcement rang in your ears, 'Change here for blue line'

TREE AND ME

In a barren land when I see a tree standing alone, I deeply analyze everything around me that's how things which are all in contrary to my situation but still I stand tall like a tree amidst all my problems and face the scariest storm, rain, drought of situations in life. What mesmerizes the toughest of my thought is that how people do not notice the beauty of trees in a farm but they notice the beauty of a tree that stands alone.

This is how life taught me how people eventually start to leave one by one and you'll get hurt at each drop of person whom you lost in your way to life. It feels so painful when people betray you even after all you did to them was love and care, I sometimes ask God, fair and truth has lost it's importance and people being selfless enjoy betraying and never fails and enjoy the thought of see someone in pain.

With every context I can imagine how painful it would have been for a tree standing alone in a bare land, how much it has suffered to be so strong, every loss is seen to those eyes who has suffered the same pain of being lost, betrayed, left out and every other thing. It is just beyond the imagination and thoughts how difficult it would have been for those who survived this phase of their lives.

I don't know how people meet permanent people in there lives, the question is that how easy is for them to cope with situations life throw at them? Believing in people has always been my best mistakes of all the mistakes I did. I no longer condemn myself for doing that because with experience and people it all made me used to it and now that I'm user to of this it no longer affects my peace and mind. I follow and believe in that tree that gives me power to fight the odds.
